

AARON PRAISES HIS STAFF FROM NOVA

Nova's role in business success

WHEN Aaron Nolan went looking for devoted staff to work for his company, NOVA Employment provided the perfect answer.

Aaron is the Owner of Hercules Plastics in a new workshop at Arndell Park and keen employer of workers with disability through NOVA Employment.

"In any business, you need a steady workforce," Aaron said.

"The disability means nothing as long as the work is performed in a proper manner and we teach the necessary skills," Aaron said.

Today Hercules Plastics has developed an enviable reputation, designing, manufacturing, and servicing a wide range of high-quality plastic products for countless industries.

And staff from NOVA have played a role in the success of the business.

NOVA has been working with business owners like Aaron for 32 years and has secured thousands of jobs for people with disability across Greater Sydney.

"We aim to find jobs for people with disability that match an individual's skills and aspirations with the roles employers are looking to fill," NOVA's chief executive Martin Wren said.

"There's no point finding someone an admin job if they prefer to work outside," explains Mr Wren.

"Before we start looking at roles, we sit down with our clients to learn their likes and dislikes before we begin to consider what employment opportunities might interest them."

So, NOVA Employment's success stories prove that finding the right job is not just about fulfilling a need for income. It is about finding a sense of purpose and fulfillment in one's life.

By matching job seekers' preferences and interests with suitable roles, NOVA Employment has provided thousands of people with disabilities the opportunity to pursue their passions and build successful careers.

In conclusion, NOVA Employment's 32 years of experience in securing jobs for people with disabilities demonstrates that when you find a job that you love, it doesn't feel like work.

It is essential for individuals to pursue their passions, and with the right support and opportunities, people with disabilities can contribute meaningfully to the workforce. NOVA Employment's ongoing commitment to securing employment for people with disabilities is a testament to the power of matching skills and interests to suitable roles.
